Romance-But There Wasn't. An exhibition of nerve and daring semanship was shown to several dred people yesterday, when Frank horsemanemp was shown to several bundred people yesterday, when Frank Maian stopped a runaway team and probably prevented some fatal accidents. The parade was forming and the streets were thronged with women and children and crowded with vehicles. Suddenly the cry of "look out." "look out." was reased up Twenty-fifth street, as Keller's big gray (cam came tearing up toward Washington avenue with one wheel gone from the big wagon that bounded and seered at every jump. The lines were own and entangled in the double-trees and there was a general stampeds or sopple to keep out of the way. Behind the team came roung Maian. The team swang to the left up crowded Washington avenue. Just as the cornor was rounded Maian came alongside and leaped from the saddle into the wagon. He then stimbed out on to the double-trees, picked up the lines and brought the team to a standatill before Twenty-fourth street was reached. The crowd then did a thing unusual for an Ogden crowd. If thee team had been a carriage team, as well it might have been and the accident of the control of the learn had been a carriage team, as well it might have been and the accident.

The greatest game of base ball played in Utah this season was the one yester-day between the Ogden by M. C. A. and the Evanston nines. It was intensely exciting from start to finst, heing tall of important crises. The home nine played a remarkable game with hardly an error to be scored against any of them.

Emmett's piching was superh, left game who pourly half over before the Evanston boys got a man as far as first base. He rose to every occasion and he did great work at fielding and sites the sixth landing and optimized first ball the new man threw struck first base. GRIFFIN WAS A VERY FRE-QUENT VISITOR.

Thinks Mrs. Berkman Was a Little Gay - Appeared in Very Scanty Attire Occasionally - Mr. Griffin Says the Lady Was His Cousin and Nothing But a Dear Priend With Whom His Relations Were Purely Platonic.

The Griffin divorce case bobbed into prominence again yesterday when the taking of the depositions of Mrs. Thurs no of Minespois was completed in behalf of the defendant, Mrs. Grif-

The proceedings were of a somewhat sensational nature, and Judge Hiles, before whom the depositions were before whom the depositions were taken, ordered the doors closed and the affair began to assume the shape of a sensation about to be sprung. The attorneys present were Judge Le Grands Young and his partner, Geora W. Moyle, in behalf of Mrs. Griffin, and Judge Loofburrow for the plaintiff.

Mrs. Thurston is the lady who, logether with her daughter, Grace, occupied a room adjoining Mrs. Cors. E. Borkman in the Harmon block. There was a glass door between the two rooms and that was why the defense thought Mrs. Thurston might know a thing or two concerning Contractor Griffin's frequent visits to Mrs. Berkman in the Harmon block last summer.

SEEN THROUGH A GLASS.

Mrs. Thurston, in her deposition, swears that she stopped in the Harmon block together with her daughter, who is a clerk at Walker Bros., from July to November, last year. Between the room occupied by Mrs. Thurston and daughter and the adjoining room occupied by Mrs. Thurston and daughter and the adjoining room occupied by Mrs. Berkman there was a glass door covered by a curtain. On one occasion Mrs. Thurston said she looked through this partition and saw the Berkman woman sitting in Mr. Griffin's lap. They appeared to be very friendly, but she did not see any compromising moves on the part of the two apparent lovers while she peeped through the curtain. On the following day she remarked to Mrs. Berkman that she ought to put a heavier curtain over the door and be more careful in the future. Some one might be treated to a fine exhibition.

A LHTLE GAY. A LUTLE GAY.

Questioned concerning the Berkman woman Mrs. Thurston said she thought her a little "gay" and the frequent visits of Contractor Jacob Henry Griffin was often talked about among the lodgers. It was an everyday occurrence to hear Mr. Griffin in the woman's room and after a while the roomers became accustomed to it.

SCANTILY CLAD. SCANTILY CLAD.

One night Mrs. Thurston alleges that the Berkman woman came into the former's room having nothing on but a pair of slippers and night dress. Whether or not Mr. Griffin was in Mrs. Berkman's room at the time Mrs. Thurston could not say, but she was quite certain of having heard his voice in there that same evening.

Mrs. Thurston gave no direct testimnoy of criminal intimacy between Mr. Griffin and Mrs. Berkman, but resided circumstances from which the public must draw its conclusions.

Lives of Three Thousand Excursionists in Great Peril For a Time.

New York, May 31.-With fully 2,000 pleasure seekers on board, the three-decked excursion steamboat Paul Kock drove on a shoal near Penfield light drove on a shoal near Penfield light house, in Long Island sound, last evening.

The vessel struck with a shock that pitched many passengers off their feet. The galley in the cook room was overturned and the beat had hardly come to a standstill before fire was thardly briskly in that compariment. The cook room is on the port side near the wheel it house. Directly above it is a largur room, in which several games of cards had been going on before the vessel struck. The players said smoke earled from the deck beneath thom and two or three of the occumants of the room made a rush for the doorway. One man a with rare presence of mind, blocked their exit and pointed out the disastrough result that might follow an alarm. The men went below and found the codies trying to extinguish the blaze. The captain and officers were having their attention wholly occupied by the other trouble into which the steamboat had found her way, and did not know of the more threatening danger.

Captain Lynch knew of it a few moments later, when a passenger who had his family on board, made his way into the pilot house and told him of the fire. The blaze then could not be reached from the cook room, and the passenger urred that the crew be called to fire quarters. Captain Lynch got some of his men to work with axes and had them cut a hole through the deck overfield the course of the through the deck overfield the two was another peril, and that kept them uneasy. The vessel had struck two miles from the light ship a short distance from the light ship

There was a second tour and shock, and the sound of grating, and as the vessel ground her keet into the sheat also came to a standatill, with bows hove up and stern decressed and seas racing alone her sides and splashing ever her guards.

The tide had commenced to run flood, and shortly after 7 o'clock in the evening the engines, which had been set hard astern, succeeded in backing the vessel clear of the reef. The hill was intact and the vessel was headed for this city, where she arrived at 11:29 o'clock. NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.
